NEW MOKENA BOARD GOES INTO ACTION

The new Mokena village board went into action at their first monthly meeting Tuesday evening with a vim, and tackled much business matters which kept the board in session until 12:30 Wednesday morning.

The matter of repairing bad spots in the village streets took up considerable time. Mayor Harry F. Mall asked the Street and Alley committee, consisting of J. G. Oswald, Albert Braun and Harold Spiess to make an inspection tour of the village streets Friday evening of this week following which stone will be purchased and the chuck holes filled in.

The yearly problem of how to collect out-standing vehicle licenses and water tax, also brought forth much discussion. The board checked over the number of autos and trucks in the village and found that out of 150 only 68 licenses have been issued so far. The board has decided to clamp down on all delinquent car owners and all vehicle licenses not paid by June 15th will be placed in the hands of policeman George Bennett the next day for collection which will mean that the delinquent license payer will have to pay a collection charge. The new board has made a ruling to make a deadline something to be strictly adhered to and not just an idle promise.

The outstanding water accounts run up to $149. Some of the delinquent water users have not paid their water bills for several years. The village treasurer is to notify the water users that over-due bills must be paid within 30 days or the water supply will be shut off. The board feels there is no just reason why bills should be allowed to drag for several years. The water department issued a booklet last year on the rules and regulations of the water service which the new board will enforce regardless of who it hits.

The job of village water pumper is an appointive one running for the term of one year. August Hentsch has held this job for some time and was the only applicant for this job and he was re-engaged for one year with an increase of $10 per month. He had been doing the pumping for $25 per month but in his application for re-appointment he asked for $35 per month, the same salary he had received prior to the depression period. As there were no other applications presented, he was re-engaged. The new salary of $35 per month becomes effective July 1.

The dog license question also made its appearance. All dog owners within the limits of the village must pay a dog license and the deadline for the payment of these licenses has been set for July 1st. All dogs found without a license after that date will be shot, after being kept in a local dog pound as required by law.

The appointment of the village treasurer and the method of his remuneration whether on a commission basis as has always been done or a flat yearly salary, provoked much discussion. The board members finally decided to let the 2 per cent commission on all money handled remain as the basis of payment.

Mayor Mall announced that the names of Ona E. McGovney and Otto Bartels had been turned in for the office of village treasurer. The board took a secret ballot on the appointment which resulted in a tie. Mayor Mall decided the issue by casting the deciding vote in favor of Mr. McGovney who will take over the treasurer's office July 1st.

Mokena Youngsters Break Light Bulbs

Youngsters have been shooting bb guns with disastrous effects on electric street light bulbs in Mokena the last few weeks. The Public Service found that 15 bulbs had been broken by shots, nine of these bulbs being broken in one day last week. It cost the Public Service $45 to replace these bulbs.

The Mokena Village Board and the Public Service Company will welcome any information leading to the arrest of the youngsters guilty of breaking the light bulbs. Parents should warn their children against shooting on village streets.

Vehicle License Notice

All delinquent vehicle licenses must be paid by June 15, 1937, and those not paid by that date will be turned in for collection and an additional collection fee will be added. This notice is final.

By Order Mokena Village Board

Notice Dog Owners:

All dog licenses must be paid by July 1, 1937. Dogs without licenses after that date will be disposed of according to law.

Mokena Garden Club To Hold Sale

TO A HOTHOUSE ROSE

Poor lovely thing that never saw a garden,
That never felt the tang of wind and rain,
Nor ever held a bee, nor brushed a bird's wing,
Nor ever kissed the sun but through a pane!

So sheltered from the glory of God's open,
Close-guarded in a place so deadly still,
Oh, if you knew, you'd rather be a wild rose
That, blown and torn, breathes life upon a hill!

—Rene Hawkins

Because of the success of the sale of shrubs, plants, etc., held several months ago by the Mokena Garden Club, the Club will again sponsor another sale of plants, both annual and perennials, which will be held at the Rock Island depot June 11 at 9:30 a. m. DST.

Any one having a surplus of seedlings, etc. and want to give them to the sale, the club will be glad to receive them. All articles for sale should be marked and ready for sale at 9:15 a. m. Friday June 11.

How many readers have noticed the various articles in the Chicago papers on "Share Your Flowers"? "Share Your Flowers" Week started June 1st and will be continued thru September.

If one could just picture a world without flowers, they would readily understand what such a conditions means to people living in the slums of Chicago or institutions where there is no means of raising flowers.

Remember the thrill you got when seeing the first spring flower peep out of the ground, and think of the beauty of your yard and of the joy a few of its blossoms would add to the life of some poor or sick person.

Share your flowers, cut a few next week, both large and small, tie them and send them to Chicago every Wednesday morning on the milk train or take them to Mrs. Harry Mall, president of the Mokena Garden Club and she will get them ready for the train. There is no charge for this delivery.

Are you bothered with ants? The lawn often becomes infested with them or else a colony of them sets up housekeeping in the rock garden, and which in either case they are troublesome. To destroy them, use carbon bisulfide, about one tablespoon poured into each hill, or make a hole in the hill and sprinkle with calcium cyanide, sold under the name of Cyanogas. Cover the hole with newspaper, for gas is generated and is heavier than air and will travel down through the various passages in the ant hill.

Take care of the roses—spray weekly with Tri-ogen, a rose garden spray, good for all insects and diseases of the rose garden.

Miss Florence Creer of Orland Park A Charming Bride

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Creer Saturday afternoon May 27th at 4:30 o'clock when their daughter Florence, became the bride of Mr. Howard Spiess, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wilbert Spiess of Mokena.

Rev. Manly Mumford, pastor of the Orland M. E. church officiated. Before the ceremony, Mrs. George Gee, sang, "Oh, Promise Me", accompanied by Miss Alma Newton at the piano.

The bride was beautifully attired in a white lace gown and tulle veil and carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley and gardenias.

She was attended by her sister, Marion who was dressed in blue satin striped organza and carried pink roses.

Mr. Spiess was attended by his cousin, Laverne Marti of Kankakee. After the ceremony, a delicious wedding supper was served to relatives and friends.

At a late hour, Mr. and Mrs. Spiess left for a short honeymoon after which they will be at home at 8203 South Laflin Avenue, Chicago.

Make Speedway of Mokena Streets

Many complaints have been made relative to automobiles speeding thru the Front street and Walf road in Mokena. The village officials are taking the matter up with the state highway department and efforts are being made to curb speeding with State aid.

TINLEY VENTRILOQUIST TO BE ATTRACTION AT FRANKFORT JULY FOURTH CELEBRATION

Harry Fetterer the ventriloquist, appearing at the July 5 celebration at Frankfort is a great practical joker and uses his wonderful command of voice so that it frequently causes lots of amusement to the people who know him.

A few weeks ago at Savannah, Ga. an amusing feature occurred at the Union depot. A train from the south pulled in and as usual all colored baggage helpers rushed to assist in unloading and transferring the baggage. A rough box containing a corpse proved to be part of the baggage. Just as four or five negroes were removing the dead man and were placing it on the truck a muffled voice from within the box was plainly heard to say: "Let me out! Let me out!" Well, of all the scared negroes you ever saw these were the limit. They let loose their hold on the box, gazed at one another a moment and then part of them dashed madly down the track as though the old nicks was after them. The remaining ones stood like ebony statues, so frightened they could not move. After a big effort, one of them called in a whisper to the baggage master: "Help boss. For de Lawd's sake take me away from dis box quick". After much explaining from the baggage master they were induced to very gingerly haul the truck into the baggage room.

Suffers Broken Leg

Carroll Roberts, aged 12 years, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Roberts, who reside on a farm west of Mokena, was seriously injured Monday afternoon when a car owned by Herman Brockman of New Lenox, driven by a young woman, crashed into the bicycle on which Carroll was riding. The accident occurred at the Bruder corner. Carroll was heading west and had just made the turn onto the Francis road when the car hit the bicycle. He was hurled alongside the road and sustained a broken leg and injuries to his back, arms and head. He was taken to Silver Cross hospital. Bones in the broken leg were splintered.

Carroll was on his way home after bringing water to his brother Michael working in a nearby field.

Hurt In Auto Crash

The intersection of Keane avenue and the Lincoln Highway north of Frankfort was the scene of a serious accident last Wednesday afternoon when an automobile driven by Raymond Sullivan, a Joliet photographer, crashed into a truck. Sullivan was quite badly injured and was taken to the Silver Cross hospital in Joliet.

Former Orland Sup., Sued Result of Auto Accident

Chas. Doctor, the venerable former supervisor of Orland township, figured in an auto accident about a year ago on 159th street when a car driven by Jewett E. Ricker collided with the former's car, and now Mr. Doctor faces the first law suit he has ever had.

Following is a letter Mr. Doctor has received from Leslie V. Drake, Claims Supt., of the Illinois Agricultural Mutual Insurance Co., in which Mr. Doctor carries insurance:

"We have the copy of the summons you sent us concerning the action filed against you by Jewett E. Ricker before Justice of the Peace Roy F. Nix, of 7767 Lake street, River Forest, Ill.

"The summons is returnable at 2 o'clock p. m. June 3, 1937, but I have written Justice of the Peace Roy F. Nix asking a continuance of one week. When I am certain of the day and hour of trial I shall write you notifying you of the same. In the meantime the witnesses who were present at the time of this happening should be informed so that they can accompany you to the court when the trial is to be held. I believe the list of witnesses include Jack Christianson of Mokena, Lawrence Doctor of Orland Park, and Donald Doctor of Orland Park. If there are other witnesses who can contribute something to this situation they should also be brought to the trial of the case."

Water Supply Contamination

The State water department has notified Mayor Harry F. Mall, and village clerk Everett Cooper of Mokena, also Dr. E. G. McMahon of the Mokena Board of Health that an inspection of water samples taken from two village wells, one located on Division street next to the former Simon Hohenstein place, the other on the Rock Island railroad property near the depot, showed the water to be contaminated and not fit to drink due to surface water running into the wells. The State officials warned against the use of this water. Dr. McMahon advised the board that if these wells were allowed to be used in spite of the State's warning, the village would be liable for damages in case of typhoid fever or any other sickness should break out as a result of persons drinking the contaminated water.

The village has removed the handle from the pump on Division street and the village clerk has forwarded the State's letter regarding the well on the railroad grounds to the Rock Island offices in Chicago.

Both of these wells have been used for many years by residents of the village and no disease has been traceable before to the drinking of water from these wells.

The State also ordered changes made to safeguard the village well supplying the village water system. Out door toilets in the vicinity of the well are to be removed and the well pit is to be kept in such shape that no seepage can enter the well casing.

NEW LENOX F-MEN OPEN WAR ON STRAY DOGS

The F-Men of New Lenox Township swear vengeance on stray dogs. There has been considerable trouble in New Lenox township by dogs killing live stock.

After several nights of watching and patrolling the country, several of the dogs were killed on Ben Mellem's farm which is located two miles east of town.

Mr. Mellem lost six sheep by the dogs. Some were killed out right while others were left wounded to die.

The F-Men hold their regular meetings the second Wednesday of each month which are well attended and with new members signing up.

The F-Men say it is well worth oes time to attend the next meeting as you may need help any time. The same as our member and neighbor, Mr. Mellem did when the dogs attacked his flock of sheep.

Mildred Nielsen Becomes Bride of Roy Cleveland

The Zion Lutheran church in Tinley Park was the scene of a pretty wedding last Saturday afternoon, when Miss Mildred Nielsen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Nielsen of Tinley Park, and Roy Cleveland, son of Mr. and Mrs. I. A. Cleveland of Orland Park, were united in marriage.

Promptly at 4:30 p. m. the bridal couple entered the church to the strains of the wedding march. The bride entered on the arm of her father who gave her in marriage.

The bridal couple took their position in front of the altar where they were met by Rev. Albert Buddenhagen who performed the marriage ceremony.

The bride was attired in white lace, wore a tulle veil caught with orange blossoms and carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley tied with a white satin ribbon.

Attending the bride were Miss Dorothy Goebel as maid of honor and Miss Beverly Moore, cousin of the bride, as brides maid. Both were gowned in yellow mousseline de soie, wore violet hats and carried Colonial bouquets of violets caught with a yellow ribbon.

Shirley Cleveland, sister of the groom, served as flower girl.

The groom was attended by Paul Nielsen, brother of the bride, as best man.

Royal Glahn of Orland Park sang "I Love You Truly."

Wm. Beagley of Orland served as the head of a group of six ushers. The interior of the church was prettily decorated with bridal wreath and irises.

Following the wedding a reception was held in the home and in the spacious lawn of the parents of the bride. Bouquets of bridal wreaths and Iris decorated the dining tables.

The bridal couple have gone to house keeping in their home in Tinley Park. Their host of friends wish them much happiness.

Chas. F. Nielsen, father of the bride, is the assessor of Bremen township, which office he has held for a number of years.

I. A. Cleveland, father of the groom, has been connected with Republican politics in Orland township for many years and held the office of Republican precinct committee-man.

CHAPTER I

By Emilie Loring

WNU Service.

With a nice sense of dramatic values, the heel of Brooke Reyburn's shoe turned sharply as she ran across the street. She went down on one knee just as the traffic light turned green. She had a confused sense of an automobile bearing down on her, the screech of brakes, of panting cars, of arms lifting her to the sidewalk.

"Hurt?" a voice demanded. "I'm all right, really I am. It was my silly heel that threw me," she assured breathlessly, even as she moved her knee experimentally. It worked. It wasn't broken. "Why wear such fool heels? If you're not hurt, why did you wince?"

The man's voice was husky; his eyes had a third-degree intensity which roused a little demon of opposition. Brooke retorted crisply:

"If you insist upon probing the secrets of my young life, I think I've skinned my knee."

She thought the man spoke as she merged in the stream of passers-by. She passed the building to which she had been hurrying to keep an appointment when she crossed the street. She wouldn't go in yet, she'd better wait till her still thumping heart quieted before she entered the offices of Stewart and Stewart, Attorneys at Law, she had too much pride to appear there breathless and shaken. That had been a narrow escape, not only for her, but for the man who had snatched her from the path of that speeding car, and—horrible thought—she hadn't even said "Thank you!"

If only she knew who he was she could write to him, but he might have been a stranger passing through the city whom she never would see again. In that case she would have to bear always this pricking sense of being ashamed of herself, it would bring her sitting straight up in bed when she thought of it at night.

She stopped at a flower shop. Its color and beauty were like a soothing hand on her smarting conscience. The air had but a hint of the crispness of early October.

Overhead a steep clock chimed. The sound reminded Brooke of her engagement. She winced as she moved.

After a furtive look about, she examined her knee. Skinned. She had known it. Shreds of her silk stocking clung to the raw flesh. She winced as her lowered skirt scraped it. Her unknown rescuer need not fear that she would forget that lesson in a hurry, she thought as she entered the office of the junior partner of Stewart and Stewart.

Where was Mr. Jed Stewart? There was an open book on his large flat desk. The title fairly jumped at her.

UNDERWOOD ON WILLS

Brooke's heart did a nose-dive. Did that particular book on that particular desk mean that Stewart and Stewart were preparing to contest the will in which she had been named residuary legatee?

Silly, she derided herself, wasn't the firm executor of the estate of Mary Amanda Dane? Hadn't Mr. Jed Stewart notified her that the will had been allowed, that she had acquired a fortune, hadn't he asked her to be at his office today at four? It was her late shake-up and this gloomy room which had started her imagination on the rampage. Where it wasn't knotty pine it was wallled with books impressively, if mustily, bound in calf.

From outside came faint distant noises in the corridor; footsteps thudding, scuffling, springing past; the incessant clang of elevator doors. Inside, "Tick-tock! Tick-tock!" the wall clock marked time for the quick procession of the minutes.

And the minutes were marching along. Where was Mr. Stewart? Was it part of legal procedure to keep clients in suspense? The secretary in the outer office had shown her into this room, had said that she was expected, that the junior partner was in conference but would be at liberty in a few moments.

Restlessly she crossed the window. She slipped behind one of the hangings to shut off the electric light in the room behind her. What a view! Roofs. Tiers of roofs alive with pigeons. Patches of bright blue broke up the pattern of gray clouds. Weather vanes pointed to the north. Innumerable wires etched gigantic cobwebs against the sky. Skylights shone like sheets of molten brass as they reflected the sun.

Her eyes lingered on the roofs. Beneath them business units were pitched together. Honesty and fraud; virtue and vice; ups and downs; efficiency and stupidity; ambition and lethargy; each unit moving in its own orbit and each thinking itself of supreme importance in the complicated pattern of the business world. She had been buffeting her way in it for five years.

"Miss Reyburn ought to be here, Mark, but I suppose like the majority of women she has no idea of the value of a man's time."

The annoyed comment in the room behind her snapped Brooke out of her reflections. How like a man to assume that she was at fault. She would make a dramatic entrance, and then—

"Glad she is late. I told you, Jed, that I didn't want to meet her. It was a beau geste for her to offer me half of the money, all of which should be mine by inheritance. I'll make my get-away before she comes. Let her move into Lookout House pronto. I'm the only person in the world with the right to contest Aunt Mary Amanda Dane's will, and, much as I would like to own the family heirlooms and add her part of the house to mine, I won't do that. I would have to prove 'undue influence' or 'unsound mind,' wouldn't I? How could I do that when under oath I would have to acknowledge that my aunt had said she would cut me out of her will? The fact that I didn't believe she would do it wouldn't cut any ice with the court. Nothing doing. I've had publicity enough over my domestic casualty to last the rest of my life."

"I Told You, Jed, That I Didn't Want to Meet Her."

Brooke's hand dropped from the hanging. That must be Mark Trent's deep voice tinged with anger. By "her" did he mean herself? So he thought her offer to share with him merely a beau geste. Should she have refused to take any of the legacy? This was hardly the tactful moment to make her entrance. He was going. As soon as the door closed, she would appear and explain to Mr. Stewart why she had been at the window; meantime she would be strictly honorable and not listen. She stuffed her fingers into her ears.

At the same moment on the other side of the hangings, Jed Stewart was saying:

"I never did understand why Lookout House was cut in two, Mark."

"It wasn't. Grandfather Trent had two houses built exactly alike, one for his daughter, Mary Amanda, and one for his son, my father; the Other House, the family called ours. Not satisfied with that, he had them set side by side on a rocky promontory—he intended them for summer homes only—with doors through the library downstairs and the hall on the second floor and connecting balconies; he was a glutton for balconies. Aunt Mary Amanda recently has lived there the year round. I inherited Father's house, but I haven't lived there since—well, for three years. It has been closed. I haven't rented it because I thought it might be unpleasant for my aunt to have strangers near when she was wheeled into the garden which serves for both places. Now, see what she does to me. She picks up this girl and later, while I'm starting a branch office in South America, leaves her her half of the real estate and all her money. Well, I'll be off. I have a date."

"Don't go, Mark. I asked Miss Reyburn to come here this afternoon to tell her what financial arrangements have been made for her, but principally to get you two face to face so that we could straighten out this mess about the personal property in the house."

"Mess! Do you call a sound, unbreakable will a mess? Aunt Mary Amanda Dane warned me that if I married Lola she would cut me off with the proverbial shilling; then, when my divorce became necessary, she was more opposed to it than she had been to the marriage. Can you beat that for inconsistency? I've always had a hunch that the French man and wife who have worked for and worked Mary Amanda for years might hypnotize her into leaving all her property to them—I warned her against them and somehow they found out and have hated me ever since—but I didn't think she would leave it to a comparative stranger. In my opinion, Clotilde and Henri Jacques are no better than a couple of bandits; they'll bear watching. I don't trust the Reyburn female either, her fine Italian hand crops up all through that will, but I don't like the idea of a girl living in the same house with them. However, she'd probably think I had an axe to grind if I warned her."

"Yellow journals and hectic fiction to the contrary, lawyers don't talk about the affairs of a client, even to their best friend, fella."

"Don't blow up like a pouter pigeon, Jed. Of course I didn't expect you to tell me; equally, of course, I wouldn't try to upset that will. My aunt's High Church convictions wouldn't permit her to approve of my separation from a wife who had been sordidly unfaithful. I thought she might soften toward me when Lola married the third time, but evidently not. If she wanted to bequeath her house, her money, and her jewels to a girl she had picked up via radio, okay. But why didn't she tell me about the Reyburn female? Why not ask me to meet her before I went to South America? That's what makes me suspicious. The secrecy of their friendship. Was the girl afraid that if I knew I would try to influence my aunt against her? If I was so dense, how do you suppose she got wise to Mary Amanda's fortune? I understand that she had supper and spent a night with her once a week, the night the companion-nurse had off. She must have had a strong motive to commute 20 miles after business hours. She's a fashion adviser in one of the big shops, isn't she?"

"Yep. Worked up from a model. Mary Amanda Dane tuned in on the radio one morning just as Brooke Reyburn was giving her fashion talk. She fell in love with her voice, and wrote to the girl asking what the well-dressed invalid tied to a wheel chair was wearing. Miss Reyburn answered with such sympathetic understanding that your aunt invited her to Lookout House."

Lesson for June 6

JOSEPH'S READINESS FOR SERVICE

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 41:33-44.
GOLDEN TEXT—See that a man diligent in his business? he shall stand before kings. Proverbs 22:29.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Joseph's Errand.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Joseph Goes Before the King.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Ready to Serve.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Preparation for Public Service.

Public service—that position of opportunity and responsibility—merits far better treatment than is commonly accorded to it, for we know only too well how often it is nothing but a political football carried hither and yon as the dictates of partisan purposes may indicate.

Scripture holds a very exalted view of the public servant. Paul tells us to "be subject unto the higher powers. For there is no power but of God: the powers that be are ordained of God" (Rom. 13:1). The Bible clearly teaches that every governmental agency and every public servant from the policeman on the beat to the President in the White House, is only permitted to exercise authority over his fellowmen because God has ordained that there should be such government. Clear it is that every right-thinking official of state and nation should be humble, teachable, discreet, and wise in the exercise of his power, and God-fearing in the discharge of his responsibility.

Joseph, the one in the procession of the patriarchs of Genesis who passes before us in the lesson today is interesting from many angles. His personal history is charmingly written and a model of appealing biography. He is a marvelous type of Christ, and one could devote hours to such a study of his life. But our lesson subject presents him as one ready for public service, and we may well profit by the lesson. He is an example of what men who serve their country should be.

I. Before God—Humble and Teachable (vv. 33-36).

The background of our lesson is found in the four preceding chapters. Joseph, the boy with dreams and aspirations, has learned obedience, humility, purity, and many other useful lessons in the hard school of experience. It has well been said that the tuition of that school is high, but the lessons are well learned.

Now he stands before the king to interpret a double dream, sent as a warning to the nation. The wise men who knew not the true God had vainly sought to answer the king's questions. Joseph sets them and us an example—he receives instructions and guidance from God, and speaks wise words because taught of him. Would that all those who stand as counsellors before kings and presidents in our day would listen for the voice of God before they speak.

II. Before Men—Spiritual, Discreet, and Wise (vv. 37-39).

Pharaoh recognized that the Spirit of God was in Joseph. That is a great testimony for Joseph, and at the same time it reflects credit upon the king. Who can say what would be the result if our government officials were chosen for their spirituality?

Spirituality is not the only qualification, however, for such service. The Christian who expects men to favor him because he is a Christian, even though he be careless and incompetent, finds no comfort in the study of Joseph. He was discreet and wise. The follower of Christ should distinguish himself by diligent and intelligent application of all his powers to his work. Then men will honor both him and his God.

III. In Service—Responsible and Powerful (vv. 40-44).

He who had humbled himself under the mighty hand of God was exalted in due time. (See I Peter 5:6.) Joseph was willing to abide God's time, and did not run ahead of him as did his father, Jacob.

The record shows that he used his place of honor and privilege to perform a difficult and arduous task and to do it well. Right-spirited men do not glory in position or power, but use the opportunity to give themselves in sacrificial service to God and their fellow-men. Someone has aptly said that a politician is one who has his eye on the next election while a statesman has his eye on the next generation and its welfare. God give us more statesmen!

Never Despair

Let no man despair of himself. We may be sepulchres full of dead powers; but Christ is the resurrection and the life, to make us shrines full of living, seeing, soaring, rejoicing thoughts and passions.—Dr. W. L. Watkinson.

Advantages of Tact

Without tact you can learn nothing. Tact teaches you when to be silent. Inquirers who are always inquiring never learn anything.—Disraeli.

Dressed for the Occasion

"H I THERE, Mrs. Astorbilt, where are you going in that lovely summer gown?"

"Not very far, Miss Junior Deb, just down to the store to buy material for a play suit like yours."

"Well, Ma-mah, if you must copy my style, you couldn't find a better model because these shorts really fit, and the whole thing is a tailored job."

A Stylist peaks.

"May I as Susie Sew-Your-Own interrupt you two with the latest word from my class in dress design? You, Sis, are a pre-vue of Miss America in proper sports wear while Ma-mah is modern to the minute with her raised waistline and full bodice. I, in this morning frock, have what the book calls classic simplicity. Be that as it may, I couldn't get along without it, because it's so cool and comfortable."

Everybody's Happy.

"Thanks for the approval, Susie. Your clever dress would be a bright spot in anybody's kitchen, and now that you've got the swing of this sewing business there will be no stopping you. But even so, I must admit I'm a proud mother. You can go just as far as you like with this new hobby."

"Gee, Ma-mah, isn't it swell to be on such friendly terms with Fashion? I think good old Sew-Your-Own deserves most of the credit for arranging the introduction. Spring means so much more when one's clothes look the part."

"You're quite right, dear, but now let's run along. We have work to do."

Heart's Silence

Not all the lip can speak is worth the silence of the heart.—Adams.

Constipated 30 Years

"For thirty years I had stubborn constipation. Sometimes I did not go for four or five days. I also had awful gas bloating, headaches and pains in the back. Adlerika helped right away. Now I eat sausage, bananas, pie, anything I want and never feel better. I sleep soundly all night and enjoy life."

—Mrs. Mabel Schott.

If you are suffering from constipation, sleeplessness, sour stomach, and gas bloating, there is quick relief for you in Adlerika. Many report action in thirty minutes after taking just one dose. Adlerika gives complete action, cleaning your bowel tract where ordinary laxatives do not even reach.

Dr. H. L. Shoup, New York, reports: "In addition to intestinal cleansing, Adlerika checks the growth of intestinal bacteria and colon bacilli."

Give your bowels a real cleansing with Adlerika and see how good you feel. Just one spoonful relieves GAS and stubborn constipation. At all Leading Druggists.

I got my name in the paper!

Only Newspapers bring the news of vital interest to you. Headlines may scream of death and disaster without causing you to raise an eyebrow. But if your son gets his name in the paper—that's real news!

It isn't by accident that this paper prints so many stories which vitally interest you and your neighbors. News of remote places is stated briefly and interpreted. Local news is covered fully, because all good editors know that the news which interests the readers most is news about themselves.

Now is a good time to learn more about this newspaper which is made especially for you. Just for fun ask yourself this question: How could we get along without newspapers?

The Curse of Progress

Rare Foresight

Bridget had just started on her duties as housemaid, and on the very first day she came up to her new employer.

"Please, mum," she said, "would yez moind givin' me a recommendation?"

"A recommendation, Bridget!" exclaimed the mistress, with a look of alarm. "Why, you have only just come!"

"Yes, mum," admitted Bridget, "but you might not be wantin' to give me one when Oi'm lavin', mum."—Buffalo Courier-Express.

FRUGALITY

Mrs. Homebody—Are you really planning to throw your hat in the ring in the mayoralty contest?

Her Husband—That is my intention.

Mrs. Homebody—Then you'd better use your old last summer's straw instead of your good felt. Someone might steal it.

HOW LONG CAN A THREE-QUARTER WIFE HOLD HER HUSBAND?

YOU have to work at marriage to make a success of it. Men may be selfish, unsympathetic, but that's the way they're made and you might as well learn it. When your back aches and your nerves scream, don't take it out on your husband. He can't possibly know how you feel. For three generations one woman has told another how to "smile through" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps Nature tone up the system, thus lessening the discomforts from the functional disorders which women must endure in the three ordeals of life: 1. Turning from girlhood to womanhood. 2. Preparing for motherhood. 3. Approaching "middle age." Don't be a three-quarter wife, take LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND and Go "Smiling Through."

All Quiet Along Slot Machine Front

All the hub bub and furor of the past year over the slot machine situation in Will County, has died down and the citizenry has settled back with a smile of satisfaction so to speak. No trace of the machines which caused a year of litigation could be found in Joliet when the restraining order was dissolved by the court a week ago.

One Joliet attorney who did not want his name mentioned has made the following statement regarding the Will County slot machine situation:

"On a strict basis of law interpretation, Judge Wilson was entirely right in his reasons for granting the court order. He based his conclusions on the fact that the machines were put in as a trade stimulator and that mints were vended by the machines when a coin was inserted. Now then, if the machines did not do what they were supposed to do under the terms of the injunction, that was not the fault of the court, but was a police matter; and it was then up to the law enforcing bodies to see that those machines obeyed the provisions of the court order which protected them. It is not the court's duty to see that those provisions are obeyed. The city could have used other weapons for keeping the number at a minimum and out of places like stores and restaurants and the city could have used a means at its disposal which would have forced retailers to take out the machines. They could have at any time used the license cudgel by revoking or refusing to issue a license. And so we write finis to a very controversial chapter in Joliet history. It will be a matter which attorneys of the future can debate on both sides and attorneys can always find much to say on both sides of any great issue."

Lawyers Defend Wilson in Petition of Confidence

An overwhelming majority of Will county attorneys have signed their names to a petition that will be forwarded to Louis E. Lewis, speaker of the lower house at Springfield for consideration by the legislators over the pending impeachment proceedings against Circuit Judge Edwin L. Wilson.

The petition, setting forth that the vast majority of lawyers in Will county feel from their "experience and contact" with Judge Wilson that they have "absolute confidence in his courage, integrity, fairness, honesty and ability in all judicial matters before him concerning litigants and the public in general", was placed in circulation the past week.

Our Graduates—
And the Road Ahead
By RAYMOND PITCAIRN
National Chairman
Sentinels of the Republic

As this is written thousands of young Americans—sturdy descendants of the hardiest breed of pioneers and nation-builders the world has ever seen—are being graduated from high schools, colleges and universities throughout the country.

What awaits them in the years ahead? There are critics who will say that the road to opportunity is blocked; that the world no longer has room or need for the personal courage and initiative which carried our fathers across a continent; that certain tired and crowded and despairing populations of the Old World have charted a better course—the surrender of all rights, all opinions to dictators, in return for promises of economic and political guardianship. To such cynics, the energy and the enthusiasm of youth merit only a sneer.

But there are others who will tell them that the real joy of life is in achievement, that the American ideal still remains one of self-rule, self-reliance, open opportunity, and full freedom of religion, of speech and of thought.

The first idea is foreign both in spirit and in origin. The second is outstandingly American. Here is how one great American, Theodore Roosevelt, expressed it:

"It is not the critic who counts, nor the man who points out how the strong man stumbles, or where the doer of deeds could have done better."

"The credit belongs to the man who strives valiantly; who errs and may fall again and again, because there is no effort without error or shortcoming, but who does actually strive to do the deeds; who knows the great enthusiasm, the great devotion; who spends himself in a worthy cause; who at the best knows in the end the triumph of high achievement and who at the worst, if he fails, at least fails while daring greatly, so that his place shall never be with those cold and timid souls who know neither victory or defeat."

There is a message spoken for an earlier generation of young Americans. It remains a ringing message to youth today.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES
"Ancient and Modern Necromancy, Alias Mesmerism and Hypnotism, Denounced" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, May 30.
The Golden Text was, "I am with thee to save thee and to deliver thee, saith the Lord. And I will deliver thee out of the hand of the wicked, and I will redeem thee out of the hand of the terrible" (Jeremiah 15: 20, 21).
Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "No weapon that is formed against thee shall prosper; and every tongue that shall rise against thee in judgment thou shalt condemn. This is the heritage of the servants of the Lord, and their righteousness is of me, saith the Lord" (Isaiah 54: 17).
The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Whoever uses his developed mental powers like an escaped felon to commit fresh atrocities as opportunity occurs is never safe. God will arrest him. Divine justice will manacle him" (p. 105).

ILLINOIS CONGRESSMEN HONOR THE ORIGINATOR OF MEMORIAL DAY

A Washington D. C. photographer in making a tour of Washington cemeteries in which famous soldiers have been buried came upon Congressman Chauncey W. Reed and Ralph E. Church of Illinois as they were placing a wreath at the tomb of General John A. Logan, which is located in the Soldier's Home National Cemetery at Washington.

The Illinois Congressmen stated that they had come to General Logan's tomb for the specific purpose of paying their respects at this time to the Civil War Commander, who 70 years ago issued a famous order which General Logan stated was

"the proudest act of my life." In this order said Congressman Reed, General Logan designated the 30th day of May as a day for "the purpose of strewing with flowers the graves of comrades who died in defense of their country during the late rebellion and whose bodies now lie in almost every city, village, hamlet and churchyard in the land."

Continuing, Congressman Reed said that the men and women who now carry out this famous order are many of them veterans of later wars and the order seems as binding upon them as it was upon the survivors of those who responded to the call of Lincoln. He believes that this famous order issued by this great man will serve to call to our memory, "our heroic dead who made their breasts a barricade between our country and its foes."

Congressman Church said that in addition to General Logan's accomplishments on the field of battle his record in the legislative halls of Illinois and the United States was such as to deserve the praise and emulation of those who have followed General Logan in the service of their country. Congressman Church added that both he and Congressman Reed felt that they could do no higher honor to the people of Illinois at this memorial season than to show their respect for the man who originated Memorial Day.

SEEK GOV. AID FOR PLOW INVENTOR MEMORIAL

The following joint resolution which has been introduced by Congressman Chauncey W. Reed of Illinois, is of special interest to residents of Will County and the town of Homer:

75th Congress, 1st Session
H. J. RES. 388.

In The House Of Representatives, May 27, 1937, Mr. Reed of Illinois introduced the following joint resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and ordered to be printed.

JOINT RESOLUTION

To commemorate the invention of the first steel plow by John Lane in the winter of 1833-1834 and to authorize the erection and placing of suitable memorials or memorial plaques.

Whereas John Lane, a pioneer settler and village blacksmith of Yankee Settlement (now town of Homer) and later a resident of Lockport, in Will County, Illinois, invented and gave to the world, in the winter of 1833-1834, it first

Whereas the said John Lane could have obtained financial remuneration for himself had he secured a patent on his invention; and

Whereas the said John Lane preferred to forego such financial gain in order that he might share his invention with his fellow pioneers so that they in turn could more readily till the soil; and

Whereas the said John Lane in so doing displayed that great spirit of self-sacrifice so characteristic of the pioneer forefathers of our great Nation; Therefore be it

RESOLVED by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Government of the United States commemorate John Lane and his invention of the first steel plow by hereby authorizing and directing the Secretary of Agriculture to erect or place a suitable memorial or memorial plaque in the Department of Agriculture Building in Washington, District of Columbia, and the said Secretary of Agriculture is hereby further authorized to erect or place an additional suitable memorial plaque at or in such other place as in his judgment may be fitting and proper.

There is hereby authorized to be appropriated, from moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $1,000, or so much thereof as may be required, to carry out the purpose of this joint resolution.

Homemakers' Exchange of Helpful Household Hints and Recipes

Conducted by ELEANOR HOWE

Instead of using a grater to grate fresh soft cheese, force it through an easy-to-clean strainer made of sturdy wire with about a 1/4 inch mesh.

For a new and delicious "something to serve," try rolling doughnuts, while they are still hot, in a mixture of powdered maple sugar and cinnamon.

Here's an inexpensive substitute for crisp celery. Slice succulent young carrots into thin slivers and serve them on a bed of crushed or shaved ice. This is one of the niceties of table service that has been revived; and with a modern ice refrigerator the homemaker can always have plenty of crystal-clear ice on hand to use for such purposes.

When washing windows, use a 10c plate scraper, with the sides cut so they are straight. You will find the straight edges of the scraper a tremendous help in getting dust and dirt out of window corners.

CINNAMON ICE REFRIGERATOR COOKIES: Cream 1/2 cup butter and add 1 1/2 cups light brown sugar gradually. Beat well. Add 2 eggs (well-beaten) and 1 teaspoon vanilla extract. Mix well. Sift 2 cups bread flour, 2 teaspoons baking powder, and 1 teaspoon cinnamon and add to first mixture. Add 1/2 cup dates and 1/2 cup broken nut meats, slightly floured. Make into rolls approximately 1 1/2 inches in diameter, roll in wax paper, and chill in modern ice refrigerator. When ready to bake the cookies, return the remainder to ice refrigerator, where the dough will keep fresh. These wonderful new ice refrigerators provide moisture which prevents rapid drying out of foods, and they provide circulating air which eliminates mingling of food flavors. When ready to bake these Cinnamon Ice Refrigerator Cookies place the slices on a greased baking sheet and bake in a hot oven (450°) approximately 10 minutes.

To save yourself steps between range and kitchen table, just screw common casters on the legs of your kitchen table. You can then roll the table wherever you wish and save yourself steps and energy.

A VELVETY CHOCOLATE MOUSSE made in a modern still-freezer: Place 2 squares unsweetened chocolate, 1/4 cup strong coffee infusion, 1/4 cup top milk, 1/4 cup sugar, and 1/2 teaspoon cinnamon in top of double boiler. Cook until chocolate is dissolved. Cool and add 1 teaspoon vanilla extract and 1/2 teaspoon salt. Fold in 1 pint whipped cream. Pour mixture into freezing container of still ice-cream freezer. Cover and surround with a mixture of chipped ice and salt (3 parts ice to 1 part salt, by volume.) Cover freezer. Place in modern ice refrigerator. Freeze for 1 hour. This recipe will produce a smooth crystal-free product due to the fast freezing made possible by the ice and salt mixture.

To intrigue the kiddies with a tempting, unusual salad, take hard-cooked eggs while they are still warm and carefully manipulate them into the shape of an apple; press down at stem and blossom ends. Then insert a clove for the blossom and a sprig of parsley for the stem. With a small brush color the egg carefully with food coloring to resemble an apple. Serve on lettuce with mayonnaise.

SCHOOL NEWS

There were twenty-one present at the high school dinner last Thursday evening. A very palatable meal was served by the Methodist Ladies Guild. During the course of the dinner, the Girl's Glee Club rendered a couple of songs called, "Rocky Mountain Lullaby" and "Play Fiddle, Play." The class prophecy was read by Jeanette Toppen and the class will by William Elkin.

Immediately following the dinner, students and teachers drove to Joliet where they attended the Rialto theatre and saw "Wake Up and Live."

The high school boys won over the grade boys in a baseball game which they played last Friday afternoon. The score was 12 to 2.

George Roesner is absent because of illness.

LAST WILL AND TESTAMENT OF CLASS OF 1937.

We, the class of 1937, of the Orland Park Township High School, County of Cook, City of Orland Park, State of Illinois, being of sound and disposing mind, memory and discretion, do hereby make this our last will and testament, hereby revoking and making void will be us at any time heretofore made.

Article 1
Knowing the heartaches felt by the Freshmen due to our passing, we think it only proper that something be left them as a remembrance.

SECTION I. Raymond Glahn leaves his (two bit) hair tonic to Phillip Sipple, but warns him to follow the directions when using it.

SECTION II. Gordon Doctor wills his friendship with the teacher to Robert Miller, hoping that he can use it as satisfactorily as he did.

SECTION III. Charles Mullin wills his front seat, next to the window to Norman Yunker. The only danger, according to Charles, is of getting caught in the midst of a spitball siege.

SECTION IV. Ruth Arnold bequeaths her good work spirit to Bill McAlleer. Little Bill may be able to use a bit of the work spirit.

SECTION V. Jeanette Toppen leaves her gift of gab and ability to lose arguments with the teacher to Donald Brennan.

SECTION VI. Phyllis Brickley, the gum chewing champion of the room, holding the record of forty-seven chews per minute, gives the gum beneath her desk to Laura Wagner.

SECTION VII. Billy Elkin wills his knowledge of Geometry and his much talked of drag with Mr. Linden to Bill Davidson.

SECTION VIII. Betty Parks leaves her loud whispering and laughing to Roy Carlson.

SECTION IX. Mac Reish, the base ball champ, wills her ability to hit home runs, and catch hard hit balls to George Roesner.

SECTION X. Eleanor Cox presents her winsome smile and pleasant ways to June Martin.

SECTION XI. Lila Enders leaves the steady way in which she does her home work to Robert Miller.

SECTION XII. Warren Townsend wills his neatness and accuracy in mechanical drawing to Marie Heiting.

SECTION XIII. Jack Schussler bequeaths his laziness and many tall stories to Phillip Sipple.

SECTION XIV. Sherman Knox Jr., bequeaths his longitude to Arthur Uthe.

In witness whereof we have here-to subscribed our names this 27th day of May in the year of our Lord, one thousand nine hundred and thirty-seven.

Sherman Knox, William Elkin and Charles E. Mullen Esq. Witnesses.

The Class Prophecy will be published next week.

Wrapped Trees Repel Wood Boring Insects

Wrapping the trunks of transplanted shade trees is recommended as one means of saving them from attack by wood-boring insects, according to Farm Adviser Leonard W. Braham.

Drouth conditions during the past few years have injured many Will county forest and shade trees to the extent that they have become subject to attack from wood-boring insects, he explained. Little can be done to save the injured forest trees and they are best removed to destroy the insects' breeding places. Although some valuable shade trees will be lost, fertilization will aid in the recovery of many.

Newly transplanted shade trees can be protected against certain wood-boring insects by wrapping trunks according to findings by M. D. Farrar, research entomologist, Illinois State Natural History Survey, and W. P. Flint, chief entomologist, State Natural History Survey and College of Agriculture, University of Illinois.

Experiments show that trees do better if the wrappings are left on the trees thru their second summer after transplanting. However, borers seldom attach a vigorous growing tree. Once a tree has become firmly established, it usually does not need further protection from wood-boring insects.

ORLAND PARK

DAILY VACATION

The Orland Park Methodist church will hold a two weeks school beginning Monday, June 14, running the five school days 9:00 to 11:00 A. M. The school is open to all children of five years and over without cost, regardless of church affiliation. The courses are non-sectarian. A short catechism has been prepared which covers only the great foundation truths which have been held by all Christians from the earliest ages. The finest parts of the Bible will be memorized and a number of the richest hymns produced through the centuries will be learned.

Much of the recitation work will be in unison, which the children like so well. Highly competent teachers will interpret the treasures of religion and morals for daily living.

All periods will be short-only 15 minutes. There will be periods for singing and also for supervised play. The school will be a definite help to parents in their anxious effort to bring their children to their best in obedience, usefulness, politeness, helpfulness, kindness and cheerfulness.

Experience with this type of school has shown that a child who comes the first day wants to come every day. They like it.

KINDERGARTEN

Orland Park Methodist church is to have a kindergarten, including nursery, conducted by the Ladies' Guild with the assistance of the Sunday School. Each Sunday, an experienced woman from the Guild will be in charge, with a girl from the Sunday School to assist.

All mothers desiring to attend the church service may leave their children in the kindergarten during the church hour—eleven to twelve.

There is no charge, and children will be welcomed of any age from a few weeks to eight years.

Date of the next meeting of the Orland Park Woman's Club has been changed from June 10 to June 9. Plans for this meeting include luncheon in the city at the Stevens Hotel restaurant and a tour of part of the Art Institute, including the Period Furniture Section. Members are asked to make reservations with Mrs. David Kreuger by June 7.

A bridal shower was held at Creer's Hall, Saturday May 22nd in honor of Miss Florence Creer. About 65 relatives and friends were present. Miss Creer received many beautiful and useful gifts.

The Memorial day program held on Sunday afternoon by the Orland Park Legion Post was well attended. The New Lenox school band furnished the musical part of the program. The Orland school children also sang a number of schools as also did the Woman's Club members.

The Illinois General Assembly has unanimously approved the appropriation of $450,000 from the Agriculture Premium Fund for the construction of permanent buildings for the Junior Department exhibits at the Illinois State Fair, J. H. Lloyd, Assistant Director of the Department Live Stock, an addition to the sheep building to house goats, a service building, and an incinerator, all to be erected at the State Fair Grounds.

E. E. Irwin, General Manager of the Illinois State Fair, announced that the funds available for the proposed constitution work may total $818,181.81, as an application for a Federal PWA grant of $368,181.81 has been approved by the Illinois PWA office and is now in Washington for consideration.

Home Bureau Meeting at St. John Hall, Joliet, June 11

All women of the county are urged to attend a meeting to be held in St. John's Hall, corner Hickory and Division streets, Joliet on Friday June 11, beginning at 10:00 a. m., central standard time. This meeting is being called in order that all women of the county may acquaint themselves with the work being done by Home Bureaus in order that they may decide whether or not they are interested in having such an organization in Will County. This will be an informational meeting at which all questions about a Home Bureau should be asked. Miss Mary Louise Chase from the Extension Service of the University of Illinois will be present to discuss the work and answer the questions. There will be a luncheon served at noon to all those attending and a program of interest to the women has been planned.

In Illinois the home bureau program in the county is built upon the needs and desires expressed by the homemakers. This program, differing in emphasis in each of the 50 home bureau organization, includes projects in organization and subject matter—clothing, foods and nutrition, health, housing, and Girl's 4-H Club work.

The clothing project includes such phases of clothing as selection, construction, renovation and the wise use of the clothing dollar.

Some phases of the foods and nutrition project are proper selection of food for an adequate family dietary, principles of preparation and preservation, and best use of available money for foods which cannot be grown at home.

Habits to insure good health, simple nursing procedures for the home, first-aid treatment, and the prevention of the common cold are subjects discussed in the health project.

The projects of home furnishings and home management constitute a housing project. Selection of household textiles and furnishings; the reconditioning of furniture, walls, and woodwork; and the making of household accessories are a part of the home furnishings project. Better management of time, energy, and money are the objectives of the home management project. Of particular interest is the arrangement of equipment and supplies in the kitchen in order that this room may be as convenient a workshop for the homemaker as is the office for the business man.

All girls between the ages of ten and twenty are eligible for the Girls' 4-H Club program. Here in groups girls learn the fundamentals of clothing, foods and room improvement.

The projects mentioned above receive attention are citizenship, books, music and recreation.

Much of the subject matter mentioned above is included in the unit program. However, some subjects lend themselves to special groups such as child care and parental education for mothers with children. Many times a subject which is of in-

Will Rogers' Humorous Story

By WILL ROGERS

POLICEMEN generally tell what they've got to say in pretty plain language. Sometimes I guess maybe they get the grammar a bit off-color, but the sense is good. Well, I was told a story the other day about a new police chief that was a graduate of the University of Chicago. He graduated out there in English and Greek, but the councilmen in the little Michigan town that hired him thought of course that he'd graduated in machine-gun fighting, since he used the name of Chicago in applying for the job.

Well, one of the first things the new chief did was to reform the grammar of all the cops. He made 'em say "This here is I," and "I'm gonna report that all's splendid on my beat," every time they called up the desk sergeant. Oh, he was there on the grammar.

A cop came in and reported to the chief that he had got into a lot of trouble on account of arresting the wrong party in a fist-fight. Seems he had arrested the one that was in the Blue Book, while the other one wasn't nobody to speak of. The cop was sorry about it, and said he'd go out and crack the nobody's head and apologize to the Blue Book guy if the chief wanted him to.

"My man," says the chief, "the important thing always is to locate the aggressor in a fight."

"What's that, Chief? Oh, you mean his gat? Neither of 'em had a gat."

"No, no. Locate the aggressor. For instance, if I should stand up right now and strike you forcefully in the eye, I'd be the aggressor, wouldn't I?"

"I dunno about that, Chief. You'd be the corpse, if that's what you mean."

"Old Khabardar"

The nickname "Old Khabardar" was popularly applied to Gen. Sir Colin Campbell, who relieved Lucknow, India, in 1857. The word means "take care," and referred to Sir Colin's caution to his subordinates to "be careful and not lose an unnecessary man." His demonstrated personal bravery and brilliant success made the term one of affection.

Interest to everyone is presented at a county-wide meeting.

In each county the units discuss those subjects thru which the home bureau may serve the homemaker. At a county council meeting the executive board and chairmen of the units build these requests into a county program for the home bureau.

When will Will County have a home bureau?

Navajo Craft Designs Used in Super Chief

FROM the Navajos of the picturesque southwest, the Santa Fe drew the inspiration for the design of its new stainless steel streamline train, the Super Chief, newest of the luxury trains in the west.

The rich colors associated with the country through which the train travels have been used as the background for decorations, faithfully reproducing the art and craft of the Navajo Indians. Sand paintings, silver craft and weaving have been skillfully combined with rare woods and modern design to give the train all the beauty and color of the desert. The train was built by Edward G. Budd Manufacturing Company of Philadelphia. The locomotive was furnished by the Electro-Motive Corporation of Chicago.

Throughout the train, each compartment has its own color scheme and arrangement, and each has been designed so that suites may be formed by use of connecting doors.

In the cocktail and observation lounges has been preserved much of the beauty of Navajo life. Sand paintings have been used in the pier panels to illustrate the characters which occur in the story of Dsilily "Noyani, the Myth of the Mountain Chant." All of the figures are executed in native colored sands and charcoal.

Coverings are reproductions of rare Navajo museum pieces, and lighting fixtures have been adapted from the fourth painting of Dsilily "Noyani. The "Plumed Arrows" have been fashioned into glow lights and a rear table lamp employs the sacrificial knife stem for a base with its shade fashioned of goat skin.

Virginia Steeplechase Jockey Comes to Grief

During the running of the Virginia national steeplechase at Warrenton, Va., Jockey Nichols was thrown by Kentucky Ginger. PETER FORGETS ABOUT THE STRANGE TRACKS

Kick your heels and jump and dance!
Hop and skip and gayly prance!
Sister South Wind's come to stay,
And Mistress Spring is on the way!

EVERYBODY said that Peter Rabbit and Jumper the Hare had gone crazy. Of course, it wasn't true. They weren't really crazy, even if they did act so. People always say that Jumper the Hare is mad at this time of the year, but it isn't so unless trying to show how happy and full of joy you feel is madness. That was the trouble with Jumper and Peter this time. They were so full of joy that they just had to do something, and because they couldn't sing and shout—for you know they have no voices for singing and shouting—they just had to do something to show how glad and happy they were, and so, in the moonlight, when they thought no one saw them, they hopped and skipped and jumped and danced, and did all sorts of foolish things.

But other people did see them. Jimmy Skunk saw them and said, "How silly!" Bobby Coon, poking his head out of his hollow tree to see if the last bit of snow had disappeared, yawned sleepily and said, "How foolish!"

But Peter and Jumper didn't know this, and they wouldn't have cared much anyway. They didn't have room for anything but the joy that filled their hearts, and that joy was because they knew that Mistress Spring was on the way, and she always brings the glad time, the happy time, the merry time, when the very air is full of joy and love, and it is, oh, so good to be alive! They knew that she was on the way because Sister South Wind had arrived and told them so, for Sister South Wind had come to prepare the way for her, to melt the snow and ice, and to whisper to all the trees which had slept the long winter through that it was time to wake. So they forgot everything else in the joy of this good news. Peter forgot all his trouble because his friends and neighbors wouldn't believe the story he had told them of the strange great tracks he had found deep in the Green Forest. In fact, he forgot all about those tracks himself. There was too much else to think about. The Green Forest and the Green Meadows, and the Laughing Brook and the Smiling Pool would soon be waking up, and Peter just had to be on hand to greet each of the sleepers, who had spent the long, hard, cold winter warmly tucked in bed, and knowing nothing about Jack Frost, or rough Brother North Wind, or how hard it had been sometimes to get something to eat.

So Peter hopped and skipped and danced in the moonlight with Jumper the Hare, and was happy. "No more days of hunting and hunting to find something to eat!" he cried, as he foolishly tried to jump over his own shadow. "No more racing around to keep from freezing to death!" And then, just because he didn't have to, Peter raced faster and harder than ever. You know, it is a lot easier to do things when you don't have to. It is fun then.

It's worth it even if we do have hard times once in a while. And it's going to be such fun to see all the sleepers wake up! Yes, sir, I'm glad I don't sleep through the winter, but I'm gladder still that Mistress Spring is on the way.

ODD JOBS ON FURNITURE

THE usual varnish finish of a table top turns white under a hot dish when alcohol or other liquids are spilled on it. These white marks are damage to the varnish. If the varnish is damaged through the wood, the only remedy is to scrape it out and to refinish. But more usually a white mark is only on the surface. The treatment for taking it out depends somewhat on the kind of varnish used in the finish; but one or another of the following will probably succeed—a little of a liquid being applied lightly with a cloth: turpentine; linseed oil; spirits of camphor. Another method is to rub lightly with finely powdered pumicestone and any light oil, applied with the finger-tip. Cigar ash can be used in place of the pumicestone.

A dent in wood is actually the crushing of the wood fibers. To take out a dent, cover with several sheets of blotting paper wet with water, and press with a fairly hot iron; the steam will swell the fibers and bring them back to their original positions. A nick or a break caused by the chipping off or gouging out of some of the wood can be filled with shellac in stick form, which can be had in all of the various wood colors and shades. Stick shellac looks like sealing wax. To apply it, a screwdriver blade is heated hot enough to melt off some of the shellac, which is then pressed into the break in the wood. When it has hardened, it can be cut off and made level with a razor blade or by rubbing with fine sandpaper.

Loose chair rungs can be made tight through the use of thin and small slips of steel made for the purpose, and usually to be had at a hardware store. The loose end of the rung is pulled out, a slip of steel of the right size is placed against it, and the two are forced back into the hole. Having fine teeth, the slip binds the rung tightly into place.

When a chair has loosened all over, due to exposure to dry air, it is best to take it completely apart and to put it together again with plenty of glue. The parts should then be tightly bound with heavy cord until the glue is thoroughly dry.

Squeaks in a wood bedstead are due to the loosening of the glued joints. To cure the squeaks, the joints should be taken apart and reglued.

A split in a table top, also caused by drying out, can be brought together by exposure to damp air; sometimes by laying damp cloths on both sides of the split. When a split has closed, small pieces of flat metal, to be had at a hardware store, should be screwed on the under side, to prevent the split from reopening.

THE GREAT
PHILOSOPHERS

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

THE great philosophers may think
They stand on rostrums, write with ink,
And lead mankind with theories—
And yet I greatly doubt if these
Are great philosophers at all.
They are too great, they are too tall
A truth to fashion or to find
Simple enough to serve mankind.

The sphere they live in is as far
From where we live as star from star.

They move in orbits, often we
In circles they can never see.
They understand the human race,
But not the people of a place.
They never hear, so far apart,
The beating of a single heart.

The great philosophers indeed
Are not the ones who write and read
But rather those who think and pray.

Man near, and God not far away.
They stand beside the bier of grief,
Have less of learning, more belief,
And do not "think" a thing is so—
Know what they live, live what they know.

MOST of us have "the blues" at times. But the normal mind soon clears them away. This is not true, however, of some unfortunate, who seem always and quite unaccountably depressed. In a world that is filled with so much about which to be cheerful and happy, these mournful souls see only that which should not be.

Destiny, for some unfathomable reason, seems to have singled them out for unhappiness, brooding and gloom which they hardly deserve. And destiny has marked them with the finger of Saturn now to be described.

The Melancholy Finger of Saturn.

Fortunately you will not come upon many second fingers of this type. But when you do, you will recognize its peculiarities at a glance. The outstanding characteristic is the twisted and distorted appearance of the finger from root to nail tip. This and excessive length and leanness, which add emphasis to the large and knotty knuckles.

The first joint usually inclines sharply toward the forefinger, the second joint just as sharply away from it, while the nail tip turns again toward the forefinger. The nail is long, narrow, often convex and deeply ridged and rather deeply set.

Individuals with this unusual type of second finger are rarely understood, even by those with whom they are most closely associated. They crave sympathy, which they deserve but which is too often withheld. If encouraged, the real abilities so often lying latent within them may be loosed in surprising accomplishments despite the handicap which destiny has imposed.

Early-Day Dictator

LONG before Mussolini or Hitler were born, an American gave a demonstration of "how dictators get that way." His name was Adolphus Frederick Hubbard and he was lieutenant-governor of the state of Illinois at the time.

In 1825 Gov. Edward Coles notified the lieutenant-governor that he would leave the state the next month and that Hubbard would be responsible for the executive duties during his absence which would not exceed three months. But Coles came back sooner than he had expected.

The lieutenant-governor, however, was so well pleased with the job that he decided he would like to go on governing. So he announced that Coles, by his absence, had "abdicated" and that as lieutenant-governor, the legal successor to the governor, he, Hubbard, was now the governor. Coles paid no attention to this but returned to his duties and was recognized by all the executive officers as governor.

Undiscouraged by this fact, Hubbard issued a commission as paymaster general to W. L. D. Ewing and when the secretary of state refused to sign it, Ewing, prompted thereto by Hubbard, appealed to the Supreme court to issue a mandamus forcing the secretary to sign the commission. The court refused so Hubbard next appealed to the legislature to support him in his claim to the governorship.

When it came to a vote, only two legislators came out openly for the "pretender" and after a while Hubbard decided to abandon his plan of becoming "governor by usurpation."

Later he decided to win that honor by more legal methods and during the campaign he made a speech which has become a classic in American political history. He said: "Fellow-citizens, I offer myself as a candidate before you for the office of governor. I do not pretend to be a man of extraordinary talents; nor do I claim to be equal to Julius Caesar or Napoleon Bonaparte, nor yet to be as great a man as my opponent, Governor Edwards. Nevertheless I think I can govern you pretty well. I do not think it will require a very extraordinarily smart man to govern you; for to tell the truth, fellow-citizens, I do not think you will be very hard to govern, nohow!"

P. S. He wasn't elected.

Yankee Saint

ONE hundred years ago they looked upon John Humphrey Noyes as a madman, a crank, a heretic and an immoralist. But today the historians speak of him as "a Yankee saint," a "true genius" and "one of the noblest pioneers America has ever produced."

Born in Vermont, Noyes was educated at Dartmouth and prepared himself for a career in law. But the religious fervor which swept the country in the early 1830's seized him and he entered Andover theological seminary to prepare himself for the ministry. However, after obtaining his license to preach, Noyes began to rebel against dogmatic and professional religion. Becoming known for his heresies, his license was taken away from him. Then he announced he was going to establish a kingdom of God on earth and he founded the Putney community in Vermont.

There he put into practice his philosophy of Christian Communism which included the most intimate relationships of living. Because of these daring experiments, Noyes was repeatedly persecuted by groups of reformers and more than once he narrowly escaped imprisonment. Finally, he moved his colony to Oneida, N. Y., where it became famous for the successful industries it started.

In 1869 Noyes inaugurated another experiment which brought down upon him a fresh storm of protest from the exponents of traditional morality. He called it "stirpiculture" which was nothing more than a program of scientific breeding for the human race long before the word "eugenics" had been coined. The results of these experiments are said by actuarial experts to be unparalleled in the records of modern vital statistics.

In 1881 his Oneida community was changed to a corporation and by the time of his death five years later there was little left of the original idea of the community but its name. During the next half century the name of John Humphrey Noyes sank into obscurity. Then his biography was written by a modern scholar who has declared: "However obvious his defects remain, John Noyes possessed the attributes of genius. . . . Such a life has seemed far more worthy of commemoration than many of those more celebrated, more honored by the nation and the world, yet who never dared, as Noyes did, to translate ideals into the reality of living."

ARCTIC AIRLINE TO SPAN ASIA, ALASKA

Routes Outlined Now Await Official Approval.

San Francisco, Calif.—As the result of soviet Russia's development of arctic aviation, Alaska and the Aleutian islands are destined again to become the bridge between Asia and the United States, the Institute of Pacific Relations believes.

In something of the same manner in which this route in prehistoric times permitted the peoples of Asia to find entrance to the American continent, the institute is convinced that the same route, only this time by air, is to become the bridge between the two continents.

According to an institute survey, the soviet already has in view two alternative routes for its aerial services to the United States. One of these is from the most eastern tip of the soviet north, Cape Chukotsk, across the Bering strait to Nome. The second follows a more southern course, leaving soviet soil in Kamchatka and following the course of the Commander of the Aleutian islands to Steward, Alaska.

U. S. Permission Not Obtained

From these points it is assumed that permission can be obtained from the United States for extension of lines to Seattle, although it is believed no negotiations have been started to date relative to terminal and landing facilities in the United States.

In the meantime, however, the institute has ascertained that the soviet has been pushing the development of arctic aviation to a point where it is certain that Alaska easily can be made the "drawbridge to Asia."

Reports which the institute have received from the soviet's northern sea route administration show that during 1936 planes engaged in polar flying during the navigation season traveled 1,398,750 miles with 12,900 flying hours.

The number of passengers carried was 5,400 and the freight transported weighed 1,980,000 pounds.

Regular Service Established.

In February of this year the soviet took one more advanced step in the development of arctic aviation by establishing regular mail deliveries between Khabarovsk and Cape Weller during the winter months when otherwise the inhabitants of that arctic spot would be deprived of contact with the outside world.

Trial trips were made early in February and regular flights were begun February 15.

The institute survey points out that Alaska already has a well developed aviation service. During the fiscal year ending June 30, 1936, the seventy-nine planes in Alaska covered 2,130,929 miles, carried 16,982 passengers and 2,418,616 pounds of freight.

Linking of this service with a service by the soviet would, the institute believes, contribute immensely to the development of the far north and the arctic regions.

The soviet, with flights last summer to Alaska, the survey finds, already demonstrated the feasibility of such a service.

As yet, the institute is informed, the soviet has not decided whether the northern or the southern route would be better. The more northern route is shorter, but slightly more expensive to survey and construct. However, the consensus in soviet Russia is that the northern route is preferable, although not ideal, and some sections of it as now flown should be changed.

Broom Plant Operated Unaided by Blind Man

Holland, Mich.—Although he is blind, Fred TenCate operates a broom factory with a power driven plant entirely unaided. He even installed the machinery for his plant by himself.

"I knew I must feel every part of the equipment in order to form a mental picture of it," TenCate said. "So when neighbors offered to set up the machinery for me I declined. After dark I went out to the building, opened the crates and began to set up the machinery. It was nearly morning before I had it up, but I knew I could run it without assistance."

TenCate has improved the equipment by inventing a machine to assemble the broom straw into piles of similar lengths and sizes.

He is as successful at making a garden as he is at manufacturing brooms, and he makes no mistakes in weeding his plots.

"I was brought up on a farm," he says, "and it would be funny if I couldn't tell a weed by touch and smell."

Cambridge to Mechanize Study of Mathematics

Cambridge, Eng.—Cambridge university is to mechanize its mathematical tripos.

Millions of sheets of paper have been used in the examination hall in working out the problems set, and thousands of hours wasted. Now it is proposed to form a new computing laboratory in which will be installed the latest adding machine at a cost of $50,000.

Candidates will spend only half the hitherto normal time in the examination hall. The half saved will be spent in the laboratory, where the machine will do the sums.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
By WILLIAM BRUCKART
NATIONAL PRESS BLDG. WASHINGTON, D. C.

Washington.—I have frequently mentioned in these columns the problems that have confronted and continue to confront the commerce and industry of the United States. However one may regard the ethics of the business interests of the nation, I think everyone must admit that business has its problems that are just as serious as the job of earning a living is to you or me. This has been especially true during the period of the depression and it is equally true at this stage of economic recovery.

Business, moreover, is affected to a greater extent than you or me by any governmental policy that is pursued or any legislation that is enacted by congress or by state legislative bodies. In consequence, it seems to be a fair statement to say that business lives by the will and the whim of the elected representatives whether those representatives be local, state or national.

Those observations should demonstrate fully the importance of one piece of legislation now pending in congress. I refer to the so called permanent sugar bill. Seldom in history, I believe, has a single unit of industry found itself in a position where it is so utterly dependent upon federal policy for its existence as is the case now with those eighteen or twenty plants that refine about seventy-five per cent of all the sugar we use on our tables and otherwise in this nation.

The situation, succinctly, is that President Roosevelt has recommended to congress that it adopt legislation of a permanent character "to protect the interest of each group concerned," and assure meanwhile that the interest of the consumer shall have due consideration. Pursuant to the President's proposal of March 1, last, the house committee on agriculture is working out a piece of legislation which seeks to reconcile the differences of all the various interests and make thereby a permanent policy which this country may follow as regards sugar.

It must be remembered that the United States imports something like seventy-eight per cent of all the sugar it consumes. The other twenty-two per cent is produced by our sugar beet and sugar cane farmers—a consequential industry worthy of protection from its government but still quite unable to satisfy demands for the commodity. Some of the sugar we import comes from Puerto Rico; some comes from Hawaii; some from the Philippines, but the bulk comes from Cuba.

Since Puerto Rico and Hawaii are insular territories of our nation, they must receive consideration as an integral part of our nation. The Philippines are no longer a possession and yet there is something of a fatherly interest, or should be, on our part. With reference to Cuba, the United States long has attempted to help the islands economically and politically in order to insure the independence which our nation helped them to establish.

So it is seen that we have in the sugar problem questions involving (1) a home industry; (2) an industry in an insular possession; (3) an industry in a nation newly born and which we are trying to lead into a position of complete independence and solvency, and (4) the maintenance of our chief source of sugar supply in a nation for which our government yet feels somewhat responsible.

That summary indicates the complexity of the general problem to be dealt with in the current legislation but the picture omits a most important unit in the industry. I refer again to those plants who must refine the sugar and must make it ready for home use or other consumption.

To make the picture complete, it ought to be recalled that for several years we have had a temporary law which fixed the amount of sugar that could be imported. It was managed through what is called a quota system; that is, the law provided authority for the secretary of agriculture to prescribe how much sugar could come in from each of the regions that I have described. This had the effect of stabilizing sugar prices and guaranteeing to the cane and beet growers of the United States a dependable market. But it had another effect which was shown by the operation of the law, an effect not so painfully evident when the law was enacted. This effect was to encourage the refining of sugar in the areas outside of the United States where the bulk of it was grown. In consequence of that, our own sugar refiners began to suffer and they continued to suffer because refiners operating in Cuba or Hawaii, to mention two examples, were able to employ labor that cost about one-fourth as much as the standard of wages paid in this country. The natural result was that our own workers were thrown out of jobs and the refining industry was running at barely two-thirds of its capacity.

To show by figures what has happened: Imports of sugar, ready for table use came from Cuba to the amount of about one thousand tons in 1925. In 1933, more than five hundred thousand tons of refined sugar was imported. It has grown some since and for every ton imported, naturally the refining plants of this country have had their volume reduced.

The President wants legislation that is fair to all interests but it seems that some of those interests are desirous of using cheap foreign labor in preference to American labor and they are fighting the President's bill. It is too early to forecast what is going to happen but there is every evidence that American owned sugar companies in some of these foreign areas are doing their utmost to kill the legislation which would substantially reduce the importations of this refined sugar.

Now there is a question of foreign policy that is involved and that part of the situation in congress concerns the State department. The home industry, of course, concerns the Department of Agriculture but there is the Department of the Interior also to be considered because of the insular territories over which it has supervision. On the surface, it is made to appear that the secretaries of these three executive departments are at loggerheads over what shall be done and as far as I can see none of the three is paying much attention to protection of the refining people who have been caught between the upper and nether millstones. My conversations with members of the house committee who have studied the problem backward and forward convinces me that congress had better for once do its own reasoning and pay less attention to the three cabinet members, each of whom is seeking to push forward the interests of his own department.

The whole situation can be summed up in one statement; if congress wants to preserve the sugar refining industry in this country (an industry that is more than two hundred years old) it can do so by providing a low limitation on the amount of refined sugar that can be imported and it can protect the cane and beet growers of the United States by establishing a quota of imports of both raw and refined sugar small enough to permit the home market to absorb the complete output of the American cane and beet growers.

I reach that conclusion because I am an American who believes in a self-sufficiency of American industry as far as it is possible to go. I take the position further because no other leading country in the world fails to protect its home industry in the handling of sugar.

Nearly everyone has realized lately that prices are climbing at an alarming rate. This has gone on over a period of about two years and there is nothing on the horizon to indicate that the top has been reached or that prices are becoming stabilized. You and I feel it, of course, directly in what we pay for the things we buy—shoes or clothing, food, furniture, and essentials for the household.

The situation is a bit disturbing for several reasons. For one thing, if prices continue to skyrocket, sooner or later we are going to be confronted with another condition like that of 1929 and no one can doubt that if prices get too high, a tailspin will follow. If there is another tailspin like that of 1929, I am afraid that this nation as such is likely to go to pieces.

Numerous factors are at work to cause the price increases. New Deal policies were formulated, first of all, with the idea of raising prices to bring us out of the depression. President Roosevelt contended it had to be that way.

His program to force prices higher has been eminently successful. In fact, it has been too successful and in that lies one of the grave dangers. Effective means of control are lacking and there is every possibility that the upward movement may reach the stage where it will fall of its own weight.

Another cause of the price inflation has been the labor movement. Throughout the nation, organized labor has been demanding higher and higher wages. I think there can be no doubt but that labor is entitled to higher wages than obtained during the depression. But in many cases, according to government records, the demands of organized labor have been so great as to constitute a burden on industry which it cannot carry.

Shaping Knitting Needle—Before using a circular knitting needle, immerse it in hot water for a few minutes to make it pliable. Before it cools, and hardens, hold it in knitting position, and make any desired adjustments such as straightening the ends. This dispenses with a long breaking-in period.

Rhubarb and Figs—To one pound rhubarb, after peeling and cutting, add half pound good figs, cut into small pieces. Place in a saucepan with a very little water and about a dessertspoon golden syrup or sugar and gently stew till tender. Serve with a rice or sago mold or hot milk pudding.

Unwrap Food—Food should not be stored in the refrigerator while wrapped in paper because the paper prevents the cold air from circulating freely over it.

Eliminating Food Odors—A small quantity of charcoal in a container on the top shelf will help eliminate food odors from the refrigerator.

Keeps Cauliflower White—A tablespoon of sugar in the water in which cauliflower is cooked will keep it white.

Hole in Tablecloth—If a small hole is burnt or worn in an otherwise good white tablecloth, it can be "mended" most effectively by stitching a motif in fine crochet over it and cutting away the spoiled fabric underneath. Add one or two more motifs so that the necessary one does not look odd. This is certainly more decorative than an obvious darn!

Eggs in Potatoes—Bake potatoes. Cut off tops, scoop out centers and season with butter, salt and a little pepper, mashing thoroughly. Half fill shells with potato mixture and drop a raw egg, salt, pepper, a little grated cheese and one teaspoon butter in each. Put back in hot oven for four minutes to set egg.

Season Lightly—Be careful when doubling a recipe not to double the seasoning. Use it sparingly at first, then add more if needed.

Glazing Liquid for Cookies—A mixture of two tablespoons of sugar and one-fourth cup of milk makes a good glazing liquid for cookies. Apply on the surface of the dough with a pastry brush before baking the cookies.
